Gluckigluck – a name that is as memorable as the product behind it. The unique, handmade ceramic carafes in the shape of fish are a real eye-catcher. Inspired by their maritime doppelgangers, they are featured in colorful variety and in different sizes. Thanks to its capacity of 1.10 liters, this extra-large edition in powerful dark gray can be used not only as a carafe for hot or cold drinks, but also as a vase and interior design object. Gluckigluck is not only a talking point with its appearance – when being filled or pouring, the carafe produces unmistakable gurgling sounds.

About Gluckigluck / Gluggle Jug

When 100-year-old design traditions meet nuanced color diversity, success is inevitable. This is exactly what the Gluggle Jug, known in Germany as Gluckigluck, stands for. The British company not only makes the carafe gurgle, but also has everyone who uses it gurgling with delight. Because thanks to the twisted, bulbous design, the carafes make an unmistakable gurgling sound when filled or poured – just like their animal counterparts. The brand history of the cult object began in 1870, when Thomas Forester & Sons designed a fish-shaped jug. When two jugs with royal insignia were presented to Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip in 1958, the jug gained a popularity that continues to this day.
