Ettore Sottsass - Storage jar ES16/100 1

A simple kitchen jar marked by a small touch of contemporary design: Ettore Sottsass reinterprets a kitchen classic with his hallmark style of overlapping coloured volumes.

Sustainability and safety

The lids are made in Italy, using a partly hand-crafted turning process. Produced using FSC-certified wood guaranteeing an eco-sustainable origin. Coloured with water-based and totally solvent-free paints. The containers are made of glass, a 100% reusable material.

Use and maintenance

Easy to fill and to use. Ideal for storing dry foods such as rice, pasta, biscuits, or powders such as sugar, salt and coffee. The natural, pure glass body keeps the flavour and aroma of the products intact. Easy to clean. For the lids, use a damp cloth or wood cleaner and dry immediately. The glass containers are dishwasher-safe. If they break, they can be purchased separately.

produced until now, unpublished versions, icons caught in their becoming. A series of projects, each referring to a different value, to celebrate 100 years of research in the field of applied arts and the beginning of a new century of experimentation. One of the values that define the Alessi's design excellence is the Industrial Craftsmanship.

Industrial craftsmanship: the Alessi factory is something between an industry and a craftsman's workshop. Almost all the operations are done with machines but used with craftsman spirit, ready to be used for meeting the designer expressive needs.

Twergi: A series of representative objects from the Twergi collection, created in 1989 from a desire to revitalise the ancient tradition of woodturning, typical of the territory in which Alessi is based. The name "twergi" ("elf") derives from the dialect spoken in the nearby valleys. In their dealings with humans, the "twergi" alternated between causing mishaps and giving a helping hand, which included teaching men how to make use of wood and other forest resources. Available in the special packaging created to celebrate 100 years of Alessi.
