Sleek, understated and very sophisticated, this smaller sized wristwatch is a masterpiece of Scandinavian minimalism. With all extraneous detail removed, the resultant timepiece celebrates timekeeping, pure and simple. A white face with elegant tapered hands and minimal time dots is framed by a beautifully crafted stainless steel case to create a watch that oozes style. The final finishing touch? - a black stitched strap in calf skin that will look better and better as it ages.

Henning Koppel is widely recognised as one of the main proponents of mid-century Scandinavian design. A long-time collaborator with Georg Jensen, his work is characterised by a rigid adherence to functionality but never at the expense of beauty, and ranges from tableware and cutlery to watches and clocks.

The 32mm watch case is beautifully made from stainless steel and contains a Swiss-made quartz movement that ensures exemplary time-keeping. The strap is calf skin.
