Meissen, Cosmopolitan Gold, sugar bowl

The sugar bowl is part of the Cosmopolitan series from Meissen. The sophisticated design of Cosmopolitan is reminiscent of the magnificent silver service of the grand hotels of times gone by. The transfer of this to porcelain represents a new, modern classic from Meissen. Versions with genuine gold, high-quality platinum, clear white and subtle "mesh structures" offer a multitude of different decorations and possible combinations. This product can be complemented by numerous other items from the service, such as the creamer and various cups.

About MEISSEN®

The Meissen manufactory was founded in 1710 by Elector August the Strong of Saxony and is the oldest porcelain manufactory in Europe. Back in 1708, court alchemist Johann Friedrich Böttger created the prerequisite for the production of the "white gold" with the discovery of hard porcelain. MEISSEN® successfully combines its centuries-long tradition with the current zeitgeist: Modern service forms and decors complement the classic range and with the design duo ODEEH, the company has been able to acquire two progressive creative directors.

The business relations between MEISSEN® and Franzen have been in place for over 100 years. This long, intensive cooperation has played a key role in shaping the development of Franzen and has enabled the growth of a strong solidarity between the companies.
